Shanghai Municipal Police. Date 4/11/19

CENTRAL POLICE Station.

3rd November 1919.

REPORT ON Zaahn and Russian Newspaper called Shanghai Life.

Made by D. S. I. Givens. Forwarded by office of Chief Detective Officer

Sir,

D. S. I. Givens called at the Netherlands Consulate on 29th September, and asked if Zaahn was a Dutch subject and whether he was favourably known at the Consulate. The Acting Consul General replied to both questions in the affirmative. Nothing was said which could possibly have caused the Consul General to write a letter about Zaahn possessing an unauthorised certificate.

According to the latest issues of Shanghai Life, Zaahn is still its de jure editor. Inquiries go to show that it is still printed by the Mercantile Printing Co., No. 26 Weihaiwei Road, and is published at No. 291 Avenue Joffre.

REPORT ON Editorial Staff of Shanghai Life.

Made by D.S.I. Givens

Forwarded by Office of Chief Detective C.F.C.

Sir,

Enquiries regarding the staff of the Russian paper called Shanghai Life go to show that G.G. Zaahn, No. 291^A Avenue Joffre, who accepts the responsibilities connected with the editorship, is a Dutchman. He came to Shanghai in 1915, since when he has been employed with Olivier & Co., No. 16 Museum Road.

G. Semeskov, who is editor in the real sense of the word, is a Russian. He arrived in Shanghai on April 9th 1919. He is said to have gained some notoriety in Vladivostock for extremist ideas, and began to consort with people suspected of Bolshevist sympathies soon after arriving here. Semeshko started a newspaper in Russian called the "Shanghai Chronicle" on June 29th 1919. It published seditious articles in its first issue and was suppressed on July 1st.

The other names given as belonging to the editorial staff are noms de plume of Semeshkov.

The "Shanghai Life" is printed by the Mercantile Printing Co., No. 26 Weihaiwei Road.

A Social, Political and Industrial Journal.

The leading article.

It is our hope to create in Shanghai an independent, progressive Russian gazette. Our task, however, as may be seen from the face of the "Shanghai Chronicle", is very difficult. The worst phase of the predicament in which we find ourselves is the lack of definite laws and regulations for our guidance. Our paper will have to submit to the personal views of narrow administrators who are not equal to their positions. We cannot help this state of affairs and must act as newspapermen had to do in the time of the censorship. We can give a hint of what our thoughts are.

We must state openly to our readers, that Russians did not enjoy liberty of the press, even in Chinese territory, where other nations can frankly discuss all sorts of questions. The ever watchful eye of the Russian police penetrates everywhere and Shanghai is no exception. As this "eye" must be taken into consideration, we are obliged to use the language of Ysop (fable language) in order to preserve our paper.

Our aims, our problems are clear.

We are trying to provide for the Russian emigrants who are in Shanghai and in China generally a good independent, progressive, democratic and impartial paper.

We are doing our best, and it is up to the readers, if they approve of our aim, to support us in our enterprise.

We shall also introduce into our paper an industrial section for the purpose of fostering commercial relations between Russia, China and the Dutch Indies.

Reuter's Telegrams.

A report on the suppression of the Shanghai Chronicle, how the editor was sued in the Russian Consular authorities and fined Rb1s 50. and how the Russian Mission in Peking nullified the verdict of the Consular Court.

A treatise on the magazine "Life in the East" in which the editors are compared to the agents of Chinese prostitutes, who are to be seen nightly on Foochow Road, ~~for printing~~ ^{delectable} pornographic articles and pictures.

Local Russian News.

News from Siberia as reprinted from various Siberian papers in Russian.

No. 5347.

The undersigned states that this Consulate General has no objection that Mr Gualtherus H. Zahn, Netherlands subject, living in Shanghai, starts there the publication and the printing of a paper in the Russian language, tending to thwart bolshevism in Russia and to favour a purely democratic government as the one represented at the moment by the rule of Admiral Koltchak and General Denikine. The principal aim of the said paper will be the development of the commercial relations between Siberia, China, the Netherlands and Netherlands colonies. The name of the paper, which has been registered at the Chancery of the Consulate General, will be "Shanghai Life" ().

Secretary of Legation,
in charge of the Consulate General
